The Western Ghats are protected forests and have been declared as a heritage site by UNESCO. Our site is not a part of the main protected forest of Sahyadris in Maharashtra, but they share the same micro- climate and eco system. The forest has ample flora and fauna. It is important to protect this biodiversity and the crust of the forest.

The slow encroachment of the forest by resorts like HILTON is leading to an increase in the building footprint within these protected forests. This is affecting the current crust and slowly damaging the ground cover.

Shillim, today, comprises of a hotel, cooking school, performing arts school and horse riding. There is a need to get rid of this impact on the forest and to design a campus that leaves no impact and to revive the original tribes and the forest crust.
