

Zara Martín stands in front of her mirror in her tiny Barcelona apartment. She feels very stressed before starting a new project at work

Last year, her company decided to add this new tracking software; emotional stability readings of all employees.
Zara has become an expert at hiding her emotions. She almost has no facial movements at all anymore.

Zara is in a meeting and she is sitting with her team. They are listening to a sales pitch.
She wants to show her strong dissatisfaction with the product and does a quick body scan; she then sends her blurb to her coworker.

Her coworker receives the blurb and responds with similar feelings regarding the meeting. After a long day at the office, Zara and her coworker decide to go for drinks with their friends

After a while, Zara starts to feel uncomfortable and nears hysteria as the alcohol triggers yearning for her ex-fiance. She has trained herself well to not let factors interfere with her social representation of herself

BLURBBB!!!!!!

She sends a BLURB to her coworker. After the received BLURB, they leave to go to Zara's apartment where they converse and show emotion in the privacy.